

No matter what our station in life may be, most of us are suffering from that rushed feeling.

From the time we prod ourselves out of bed in the morning until we lay our weary bodies down at night, we are going at a tension. We feel that we are not getting all the things done that we want to do, that those neglected things are assembling into some dark host that eternally prods and pushes and makes us hurry ever and ever faster. Our brain is in a whirl, our nerves are taut, and usually, the climax is a darkened room, a white-capped nurse, and the feeling that nothing matters any more, and that it isn't hard to die anyway.

And this feeling pervades all ranks. The business woman is pushed all day, and when she goes home at night there is such an appalling list of things to do and of things that have been left undone, that she is desperate. The housekeeper tries frantically to clean and cook and sew and make calls and go to church and have a party now and then, and all the time she is distraught at the things that are left undone. The society woman rushes breathlessly from luncheon to tea, and tea to dinner, and dinner to ball. No matter where you go today, you seldom find the woman of calm, of serenity, of leisure.

It is not wholesome, this rushed feeling. It means a breakdown sooner or later. Nerves that are always at a tension will in time snap, a brain that is always in a whirl will wear out sooner than it should. A right amount of activity and wholesome interests are promoters of health, but an over supply becomes a burden too heavy to carry, and the strength fails.

The woman who has this rushed feeling should see what she can cut out. She should study and see what, in all this scramble, is worth while, and what is not. Is she frantically pawing around in a squirrel cage that simply uses up her strength, but never gets her anywhere, or will she arrive at some desired goal, or accomplish something worth doing?

With many of us, it must be admitted, that all this hurry and strain accomplish little. At the end of a year, we are not much farther ahead in the things that count than we were the year before. We may have left several hundred visiting cards around various houses. We may have shown off several dozen hats and gowns. We may have proven to our satisfaction that our silver and cut glass are finer and more lavish in quantity than our neighbors. But really as sane people, are these things worth while? And if we have done these things at the expense of our health, or at a sacrifice of that leisure which would have given us time to read and reflect and grow mentally and spiritually, has it been worth the doing?

So, if our health is suffering, or our finances suffering, or our real spiritual self suffering, from this rushed feeling, let us cut out the useless things, the rubbish that is prodding us to this frantic pace, and settle down to a calmer, saner gait. Our health will improve, our spirits lighten, and life will take on a real joy, of whose delight we never get the faintest taste now, as we hurry frantically on our round of uselessness.

SOCIAL NEWS OF THE DAY.

Those who did active work in the preliminary meetings of the Christian Extension Movement must have viewed with pleasure the great course of people at the Empire last night for the opening service. Aside from being a great singer, Mr. Butler, when he talks, impresses his hearers as one who knows what he is talking about. His few well-chosen words, simply spoken, did not seem likely to appeal to the emotional nature of his hearers, so much as to their reason, and the audience was an interested one.

In urging better acquaintance with the Bible, last night, Mr. Butler quoted a verse from the Scriptures and asked his hearers to look it up. After the service a lady told me how, about sixteen years ago a Mr. Loomis was conducting services in a local church and he, too, was urging a diligent and systematic course of Bible study. One night he said, "I do not believe that a dozen persons in this house have read the second chapter of Jude. Will all who have read this chapter please raise their hands." A few hands were seen timidly lifted, and the speaker smilingly asked them to read it again. "I," said the lady, "wishing to vindicate myself, went to Mr. Loomis afterward and told him that the reason I had not read the second chapter of Jude was that I scarcely ever looked at the Old Testament. The expression on the gentleman's face, though he only faintly smiled, sent me home to my Bible to find just one chapter, in Jude's general epistle, and that it preceded the Revelation."

Mrs. E. R. Gayler will be hostess for the Service Bridge Club this afternoon at her home on Thurston avenue. The prizes will be Chinese embroidered linen.

Mr. and Mrs. James John Creswell Haynes entertained at dinner on Saturday night for Lieutenant Colla F. St. C. Stockwell of King Edward's Horse, Imperial Yeomanry, and Mr. Vivian Davies, who were through passengers in the Nile. Mr. Stock-

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Dorrence, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Berndt, Mrs. Harold Hayselden, Mr. John Kinney and Mr. J. P. Dorrence of Camden, New York. Kail's orchestra furnished the music for the evening.

Hawaii Herald: Mrs. Carl Schurz Carlsmith last Saturday afternoon entertained the Piano Club at her Puna residence, Mrs. McKay also being a hostess, an elaborate program being presented.

THE THEATERS

St. Patrick's Day Celebration at the Liberty Theater.

Tonight at 8 o'clock sharp at Ye Liberty the first number of the best vaudeville program ever presented in Honolulu will begin, and will be followed by seven first-class acts, all teeming with Irish wit and humor. The occasion being the annual celebration of St. Patrick's Day by Division No. 1 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The Hibernians, in deference to the wishes of many of their friends, have selected the largest theater in the city, as last year they had to turn away many of their friends for want of room. Manager McGreer of the

LACY WISDOM
Who Sings "Killarney" at the Liberty Tonight.

Liberty, working in conjunction with the A. O. H. committee, has prepared a program that will appeal to all, he having arranged for eight big acts and four pictures, and increased the orchestra, so as to make tonight's affair a memorable one.

The entire proceeds of the entertainment will be donated to the Kailhi Orphanage, a very deserving institution which is caring for a number of the city's parentless children and is sadly in need of funds to broaden its field of usefulness. This act on the part of the Hibernians is a very commendable one and should receive the support of the whole theater-going populace of the city. Besides helping a most worthy cause, the entertainment will be worth more than the price of admission.

The program will consist of Harry Corson Clarke and Margaret Dale Owen in vaudeville; Grace and Monty Wilks in a novelty turn; the Gilliam-William Four in eccentric dancing; Hanley, Marguerite and Hanley, in their initial appearance here; the Mortimers, in a character turn of merit; Sam Well, in monologues; Jourdan Operatic Quartet, in Irish selections, and last but by no means least, Poets Jack Cleary and P. Maurice McMahon in genuine Irish dances in costumes. Four new pictures will also be shown in addition to the above. Father Cushman of Salt Lake City, a very forcible speaker, will give an address on St. Patrick.

The prices of admission have been placed at 25c and 50c, with the box seats reserved at $1, for which tickets may be reserved by phoning 2962. Owing to the length of the program the performance will start at 8 o'clock sharp.

Bijou in Irish Garb.

The Bijou theater will present a typically Irish program tonight in honor of Ireland's patron saint, Petite Effie Johnson, whose hair is evidence enough that she came from the Auld Sod, will sing Irish ballads in her own winning way, while Robert Athon will be seen in a singing and talking act in which he will introduce old and familiar Irish melodies.

Curtis and Le Van will be seen in their first change here. They will feature their famous Bowery act, something that is entirely new here, and will give them a chance to display their talent at its best. "Blondie" Robinson and Bowen, the eccentric comedians, will appear in a hilariously funny act entitled "The Hodge-carrier's Picnic." These people have been the talk of the town and will make a still better impression with their act tonight. The feature film will be "A Daughter of Erin," a beautiful love story, also showing beautiful scenes in Ireland.

Siege of Calais at Popular Prices.

The "Siege of Calais," the picture that ranks with "Dante's Inferno" in point of historical interest, will be shown for three nights this week at the Savoy at the popular prices of 10c, 15c, and 25c.

The film, in two reels, is a piece of art and is the production of the Pathe Freres Company, who went to an enormous expense to get the picture historically correct. It shows the actual siege of the city by the English and the unsuccessful attempt of the French to relieve it, the surrender of the city, the condemned burghers about to be beheaded, and the intercession on their behalf by Philippa, the queen of King Edward III. There are two thousand people in this film, which is an interesting as well as an instructive study from beginning to end. Besides these films, a number of other interesting subjects will be thrown on the screen, making a very interesting moving picture program. The Bijou Has Big Special Program Tonight.

Blondie Robinson, the little man who has created such a big stir in Honolulu theatricals, will positively appear with his partner Brown tonight, reports of inflections, lawsuits, etc., to the contrary notwithstanding. Robinson has without doubt made an instantaneous hit here. Robert Athon and Effie Johnson will each be seen in a single act tonight, Mr. Athon doing his singing and talking monologue that won him so much popularity throughout the States. Miss Johnson, who has made a host of admirers here by her pleasing work, will be heard in a repertoire of Irish songs, featuring "My Wild Irish Rose," illustrated. Curtis and Le Van, who arrived from the mainland last week, will appear in their Bowery act. There will be four new acts, and four new pictures, the feature picture being "A Daughter of Erin," with scenes laid in old Ireland. The orchestra will render all popular Irish music and it will be a grand gala night, with all paying homage to St. Patrick, Ireland's patron saint.

The man who makes good doesn't sit down and wait for his ship to come in.
